

Pair Review

Deborah Wahlstrom • Successline Inc

Description

This is a review activity that students conduct in pairs. A feature of this activity is that students get immediate feedback, in the form of a correct answer. Also, because correct answers are built into the review technique, even students who are uncomfortable with the content can do well — this helps them learn!

Steps for Conducting the Activity

1. Before assigning this review activity to students, simply write down assorted “test” questions and answers. Since this activity helps students memorize information, this should be recall types of material. Facts, dates, figures, famous people, documents, definitions, etc., are all appropriate for this activity. There are three template sheets with this book — one each for a ten, twenty, or forty item review.
2. Cut the completed template and make sure partners “A” and “B” each have a section. Partner A calls out a question (from the “A Questions” list) and partner B answers it using his or her “B Answers” list.
3. Students enjoy making these review sheets on their own. You may want to encourage them to do so.
